Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

There's a space for good to bloom in every heart of man or woman—no matter how wild or human, however brimmed with gall, the heart may beat without it; and the darkest heart to doubt it has something good about it. After all.—James Whitcomb Riley.

R. S. Askew left last night for his home in Lebanon, Tenn., after spending several weeks in the city looking after business interests.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Johnson and Fred Stroud and Miss Anna Norton spent the week end at the Stuart Camp "Edgewood" at Caddo Gap.

Mrs. Hecce Garrett of Pine Bluff arrived yesterday for a visit with her mother Mrs. Lemley and other relatives.

Wilson Higginbotham of Fordyce is the house guest of his sister, Mrs. Hayes McRae and Mr. McRae.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miles spent Sunday in Texarkana and lunched at the new Hotel McCartney.

Miss Louise Hanagan entertained the members of the Vacation Bridge club Friday afternoon at her home on South Elm street. Bright hued mid-summer flowers adorned the rooms which were arranged for five tables with attractive accessories. High score was made by Miss Lorraine Whitehurst and she received a dainty prize. Following a series of pleasant games, the hostess assisted by Mrs. K. G. McRae, Sr., Miss Helen McRae, Miss Frances Wolfe and Miss Virginia Goddard served a delicious salad and ice course.

H. T. Bennett announces the marriage of his daughter, Hope to Webb Lester, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Webb Lester, Sr. The wedding was solemnized last evening at 8 o'clock in Texarkana, with Dr. Freeman, Pastor of the First Methodist church officiating. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. H. T. Bennett, a 1920 graduate of Hendrix-Henderson college, taught in the Fulton high school last term. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Webb Lester of this city and is a former student of the Texas A. and M. college and ranks as one of Hope's promising young business men.

Mrs. Luther Lee and daughter Louise and son Luther, Jr., have returned from an extended trip to Los Angeles and San Diego, Calif. and other points of interest in the west.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Robison, son, George, Jr., returned this morning from St. Louis and other hot points where they purchased goods for the George W. Robison Co. stores.

L. W. Young has returned from a business trip to Shreveport.

Mrs. Ewing McPherson and Mrs. Roy C. Wood attended the B. & P.

Inter-American Commerce Meets

Twenty Nations Join in the Meeting at Sacramento

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 26.—(UP)—The first unofficial trade gathering in the history of Inter-American commerce is in session here today, with 20 American Reciprocity Trade Conference.

Governors of Latin American states and provinces, importers, exporters and business leaders rubbed elbow with United States Senators and other outstanding business leaders at this country as the meeting was called to order.

Nine months of intensive preparation were necessary to carry the message of reciprocity to a successful climax. The idea for the meeting had been initiated. The invitations, sent out to Latin American nations December 16, 1929, asking every organization and government of these countries interested in stimulation of trade and a better relationship to send representatives.

Opening the conference yesterday a public session was held in the Sacramento Municipal Auditorium. A large attendance from all parts of California attended, and delegates were officially welcomed by the Sacramento Region Citizens Council, which originally sponsored the idea.

Beginning today, meetings were held in the state capitol building here. Geographical round table sessions will occupy the attention of delegates for the first two days. Grouped according to their respective geographical location, the several delegations will have an opportunity to discuss trade ideas with their various importing and exporting neighbors.

"Obstacles to reciprocity" follow the geographical round table sessions with a series of nine distinct major topics. They are: tariff, quarantine, pure foods, standardization of commodities, customs regulations, transportation, financing, fruit culture, and terminals.

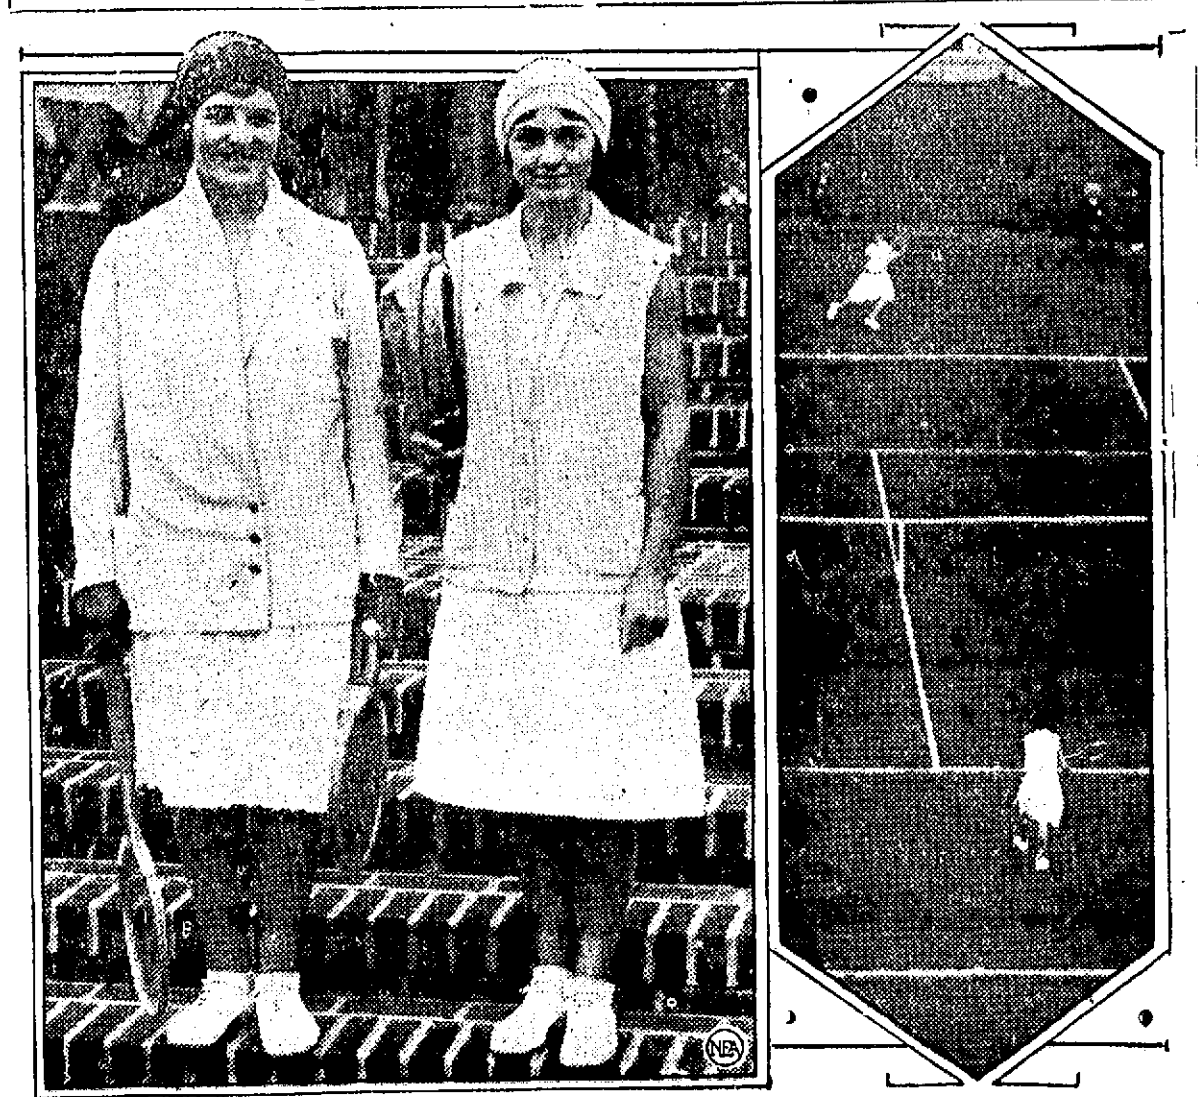

By discussion of these topics, every possible barrier of trade is brought under the scrutiny of some round table group. Following completion of each round table session a recommendation in the form of a resolution will be passed to a committee, which will prepare such recommendations for final action by the conference as a whole.

Final analysis of accomplishments of the Conference will be made next Friday, August 29, when the Committee on Resolutions presents its recommendations to a general session. The resolutions adopted will be transmitted directly to legislative bodies of American countries represented for action.

As English Girl Star Won U. Tennis Title

The first foreign player to win the women's national tennis championship in the 43 years of the tournament's history, Betty Nuthall, England's 19-year-old court queen, proved invincible to American stars. Now to occupy the throne vacated by Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, the English girl champion is pictured above (left) with Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper of Oakland, California, whom she defeated at 1-1, 6-4 in the 36-minute deciding match at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, Long Island. They're shown at the right in action in the final game; Miss Nuthall is in the foreground.

Tiny Speed Plane in Air Races

Just about the closest approach to a hummingbird that aviation has ever devised is this tiny plane—measuring only 20 feet from wingtip to wingtip and weighing only 750 pounds with its pilot aboard—that Captain John A. MacReady, famous ex-army pilot, will fly in the national air races at Chicago. MacReady, shown at right, has already reached 200 miles an hour in preliminary tests. The unique plane is powered by a 130-horsepower motor, has no struts or wires and was designed and constructed by six jobless airplane mechanics in San Francisco who wanted to try out ideas of their own.

Shreveport Plans For Big State Fair

Twenty-Fifth Year of the Louisiana State Fair to Be Celebrated

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 27.—No expense or effort is being spared by the management in preparing the movement program for visitors to the 1930 Louisiana State Fair, to open Shreveport October 25 and run through November 2. There will be a unusually interesting array of attractions, with a Rodeo-Stampede among the outstanding new amusements. Many cowboys and cowgirls will participate in the rodeo stunts.

The amusements which have been booked also include a number of high class circus acts, featured with a Broadway production put on principally by clever dancing girls and known as "The Winter Garden Revue." Fireworks each night, shows on the Gladway day and night; band concerts; the annual clash between the Louisiana and Arkansas universities on November 1 and the Baylor-Centenary game on October 25 and several other football games.

Brisk interest is reported among prospective exhibitors, many of whom are writing for copies of the catalogue in which all of the many State Fair premiums are listed. Entries have already begun to arrive in different departments, and when the Fair opens October 25 a magnificent array of exhibits of livestock, agriculture, poultry, textile, culinary, etc., is confidently expected. Several entries for the Paris Agricultural contest have been received and parish agents are urged to send in their entries at their earliest convenience in order that space may be reserved.

Statistics recently made public show that the attendance at State fairs the past several years has been steadily increasing and the reports received at the office of the management of the Louisiana State Fair "tempt the prediction that splendid attendance will be recorded at the Silver Jubilee Fair—this year's program will mark the 25th year of the existence of the Louisiana State Fair. It's your fair—so be there."

Expensive Sun Bath

EVANSTON, Ill., Aug. 27.—(UP)—Taking advantage of the curative properties of the sun's rays is expensive. Thomas Anda, 25, says. Arrested at Calvary beach by Evanston police while sunning himself in bathing trunks, Anda was fined $5 on a charge of indecent exposure.

"Aimee Did It!" Says "Ma"

Whether Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson, right, is going blind or is suffering from a nervous breakdown . . . or is having her face lifted . . . or is writing a book . . . remained a mystery, but one reason why Aimee is in seclusion at a cottage near Los Angeles was given by Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, left, her mother, who exhibited a broken nose she said she received in a fist fight with her daughter. "But I'm not mad at her even if she did knock me down after accusing me of talking about her," Mrs. Kennedy said. Aimee denies that she struck her mother, explaining that "it was just an argument."

Fire Works Show For County Fair

Best Display Ever Shown In City Has Been Engaged

A fireworks show more spectacular than any ever staged by it has been engaged by the coming Southwest Arkansas Fair, Hope, Arkansas, September 22 to 27, Secretary W. Home Pigg, announced today.

All kinds of fireworks, including bomb shells, sky rockets, Roman candles, star-shells, bubbling fountain flower-pots, and set pieces will be shot off. One of the biggest fireworks companies in the country will furnish all the fireworks.

Many new "stunts" unknown to the fireworks world until this year will be presented. Special fireworks experts familiar with the staging of fireworks shows will be sent here to stage the show in a professional manner. Since hundreds of pounds of powder and high explosives will be used in the program, these experts have been considered necessary to protect the public against accident.

Included in the assortment of fireworks for the coming fair, will be colored lights and star-shells recently perfected for aerial warfare by specialists who have been working on the problem for many years.

Supplementing the fireworks program, many other entertainment features have been engaged for the coming fair. There will be horse races, band music, free acts and a carnival. A big educational program is also assured.

Cultivate 72 Per Cent of Scotland

Recent Agricultural Reveals Fourteen Million Acres

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Recent agricultural surveys by the Ministry of Agriculture show that there are 14,372,000 acres of agricultural land in Scotland. This figure roughly represents about 72 per cent of the total land area.

The total acreage under crops and grass is 4,665,462 acres. Of this total there are 3,133,430 acres of arable land and 1,532,032 acres of permanent grass. Slightly over 800,000 acres are sown with oats. The next most important crop from the standpoint of acreage, is turnips and swedes, since nearly 400,000 acres are given over to growing turnips and swedes. Rye-grass, clover and other rotation grasses are found on 1,500,000 acres.

Potatoes are grown on about 145,000 acres, while 111,924 acres are devoted to Scotland's barley crop. Slightly more than 50,000 acres produce the annual wheat crop. Rye is sown on 32,000 acres and beans on about the same acreage.

Small fruit is grown on 8,006 acres and 1,200 acres are covered with orchards.

Robbed on Trolley

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—An enterprising gunman, whose motto might well be "Don't inconvenience your victims," robbed Harry E. Bradley, an insurance broker while Bradley was riding on a street car. Seating himself next to the insurance man, the robber thrust a gun concealed in a newspaper against Bradley's side and demanded his money. Bradley handed over $9, and the robber quickly left the street car at its next stop.

Elks to Stage Dance Monday Night, Sept. 1

The Elks will celebrate Labor Day with a German dance beginning at 8:01 a. m. on September 1, and continuing until dawn. The DeLuxe orchestra of Shreveport will furnish the music and a good time is anticipated by many dancers from surrounding towns as well as Hope, who will attend the first dance of the fall season. This dance is for the benefit of the Elks' building fund. The home will be open at 10:30 p. m. on the night of August 31 for the convenience of the visitors. A maid and porter will be in waiting.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

by William Braucher

Poor Tired Philip
PHILIP crashed to earth earlier in the morning. Just as sure as headlights after you stayed late at the office to clean up a lot of work, a roadside calling card bearing the awful words "Shady Rest" will fall out of your pocket while you sleep and become the subject of a hilarious investigation by the little woman next morning. Justice will triumph in the end.

Thus, do we learn after anxious weeks of fretting and fuming and fussing, chewing the fingerhills to the core, tearing the hair in nervousness, wakeful nights and not afterwards, that that great gladiator, Philip Suffling Scott, was just tired when he lost to Willie Stripling—just tired, that's all.

The Terrible Tidings

JAMES J. JOHNSTON, who seconded the Soho Swowner in his posturings with Young Stripling, brings us the terrible news from London town.

"My Philip was tired," says James. "Just tired, that's all." So dear Philip wasn't mangled so badly after all. He just grew weary of the whole sordid business and sat down. Like Joe Beckett, the original resting pugilist, poor dear Philip fairly dozes on sitting down. By the way, why is it that those British heavyweight never have gone in for tree-sitting on a big scale? Poor dear Philip and poor dear Joe! My, my!

Uncalled for Rudeness

JAMES J. JOHNSTON, though, was most impolite with his poor dear Philip, according to journals from London town. After Stripling had bent Phil's ribwork with a most rude shove, the seconds in poor Phil's corner were hard pressed to restore their fellow to the vertical. James J. Johnston's efforts were labeled "hugor" by the British writers. He uprooted, hooked and jabbed Phil as the Phantasm One sat on the stool in the corner in a comatose condition. In fact, we are told James J. is the only living person who ever knocked a British heavyweight conscious.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

PAT MALONE once experimented with what he called the "tape ball." Pat stripped the bark of his glove with white adhesive tape. His idea was to wave the glove up and down about the time the ball reached the batter thus befuddling the man at the plate. The first day Pat tried it in a game was with Chuck Klein, the big bat man from Philly. Klein has a nasty way of rifling a ball back at a pitcher, making it practically impossible for a moundsman to enjoy himself much while Mr. Klein is up there. Pat wound up, let a fast one go right down the middle and waved his black and white glove. But something went wrong with the idea, because Klein denied Pat's shins with a steaming liner. Where with Pat evacuated the field of invention, leaving such matters to Thomas Edison, et al.

When the bell rang, Phil rushed out to face Stripling, but it was James J. Johnston's rude handling from which he fled. Tom Webster drew a cartoon showing Phil fleeing from his manager and tormentor.

It's a pretty state of affairs, indeed, when a British heavyweight cannot exercise his God-given prerogative of sitting down even in his own corner between the rounds!

Perish the Thought!

I'm afraid I'm going to have a horrid dream about all this brutality. Maybe I'll dream of watching Babe Ruth being wheeled to the plate in a large plush chair, plunking an enormous lapis lazuli baseball just out of some somnolent outfielder's reach and being wheeled around the bases briskly while the umpire snores resonantly as he reclines on an umbrella-covered chaise-longue. And wake up screaming!

Vivacious was the former first lady of Mexico. Charming, she discussed her loves—children, beautiful faces, dancing and tennis. Of her dislikes—divorce and the American game of bridge, she had less to say.

"A woman's first interest should be her home. If she makes her husband a good home, she need not worry that he will forget her."

"A woman," Senora Portes Gil continued, "should know how to prepare a meal for her husband, how to keep house and look attractive and sweet at the same time."

Senora Portes Gil continued that the ideal wife should enjoy her husband's sports, should enjoy dancing and always present herself to him in as attractive manner as possible.

"My chief interest," she smiled and spoke in Spanish, "is my three year old daughter, Rosalva."

Rosalva came tumbling in—a small vivacious mass of human energy, ready for a grand rump. Strangers, however, brought a change and a sophisticated little miss bowed and said good morning in her native tongue.

"I am going to bring Rosalva up to know how to keep house for her man, to know how to cook and sew. She will have governesses who understand the simple arts of home-making."

Senora Portes Gil's chief hobby, she said, was the Children's Protective League of Mexico, of which she is president and one of the founders.

"We have started a system of milk stations, baby clinics, playgrounds, and classes for teaching mothers how to feed and clothe children properly. We are so proud of it," the Senora said.

"I do not like to think of mothers through Mexico loving their children as we love Rosalva, worried and unhappy at their helplessness when their babies are sick, poorly clothed and neglected while they must be working."

"I think it the duty of society to try and help the oppressed," the Senora smiled.

"We play though," she said and her face lighted up. "You know Mexico is a very gay place—we dance, wear beautiful clothes, and have a very gay time."

Dawes Still Strays From Beaten Path

Ambassador's Birthday Recalls Anecdote of London Conference

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 27.—(UP)—During the years that Charles Gages Dawes rose from an Ohio railroad engineer to Vice-President of the United States he was noted for his versatility. Frequently he was reported undertaking work reputedly off his beaten track.

Since his arrival in Great Britain as the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James he has continued to surprise those who know him best. In connection with his birthday today, the following anecdote is of interest.

Not long ago he visited the offices of the American Commercial Attache, located in Bush House. After he was shown around a bit he requested all the trade commissioners to adjourn to the front part of the office.

Asking each commissioner to take a seat he proceeded to ask questions about each phase of work conducted in the department.

Turning to the commissioner of agriculture he said, "Tell me just what chances are there for a reduced European wheat yield? Is rust and last spring weather hindering the crops much?"

Receiving an answer he asked the commissioner of shipping about proposed giant liners, ship building activities in Scotland and the amount of coal being sent annually from the shores of Great Britain.

Discussing airplanes he said, "Are the commercial standards of Great Britain higher than those in the United States? Imperial Airways certainly enjoy a fine name for safety and service."

Before he left the office he inspected several reports. Commissioner told the United Press after his visit that he may call back again within several weeks, and that when he does, his questions probably will be timely interesting and thought-provoking.

Agitators Afraid to Return to Homes

Although Forgiven For Deeds Group Fears Trap Set By Government

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 26.—(UP)—According to the newspaper Slovak, permission to return home has so far been given to 10 Slovaks who were compelled to flee from Czechoslovakia to escape imprisonment under a law which makes it illegal for anyone to agitate or the observance by the Czechs of the Treaty of Pittsburgh (Pennsylvania).

Few of the 26 have availed themselves of the permission because they fear that they will be "framed" and imprisoned for long terms on false charges as was the case of Slovakia's great intellectual leader, Prof. Adalbert Tuka.

12½ % Net Gain In Volume Of Business

Last Year Everybody was looking through rose-colored glasses.
This year people are using blue glasses instead.
Why not look through plain glasses?

The volume of business of the Hope Star for the first six comparative months in our history (Feb. 1st to July 31st) showed an increase this year of twelve and one-half per cent over last year.

It is said that the best barometer of any undertaking is its financial showing. Hope's two former daily newspapers were consolidated into the Hope Star on January 17, 1929. That the consolidation was appreciated more and more as time has passed, is indicated in this splendid growth in patronage over last year, in view of the state of general business conditions.

But more important is the growth in importance in the minds and hearts of the readers which made possible this increase.

This summer has seen the largest total of paid subscribers in the short history of the Hope Star. There are now far more net paid subscribers in the trade territory, than any two former daily Hope newspapers.

NEW ROADS—NEW SUBSCRIBERS

Roads leading into Hope will be in much better condition than ever before. Much work is now being done on the Spring Hill road; and the Rosston road is nearing completion. Almost each day brings a net increase in the number of subscribers who live on these roads, and throughout Hope's trade territory.

Hope merchants who use the advertising columns of the Hope Star get their advertising into many homes in this section who have never before subscribed to any Hope newspaper, so far as we can learn.

Southwest Arkansas people are not going to quit buying merchandise this Fall. And more of them than ever before in history can conveniently drive to Hope, over good roads, to make their selections. And Hope store are preparing for them with greater values than are to be found, ordinarily, in a city of this size.

Wife of Mexican Chief Home-Maker

Senora Carmen Garcia Portes Gil Tells How to Keep a Husband

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—(UP)—American wives need not be chary in trusting husbands if they follow the first rule of home-making, Senora Carmen Garcia Portes Gil told the United Press while visiting New Orleans.

The young wife of the former president of the Republic of Mexico, has as her chief interest her home—her second interest the homes of her people—the people of Mexico.

Pair Arrested For Robbery Attempt

Caught on Top of Store in Arkadelphia By Night Police

ARKADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Night City Marshal R. Charles Hall and Day City Marshal Ed Bloomfield captured two men on top of the Piggy-Wiggly grocery store building here. The men, who gave their names as Leo Long and Harold Conley, had a brace and bit and were engaged in boring holes in the building for the purpose of gaining entrance for robbery. They were placed in the Clark county jail and will be given a hearing on charges of attempted burglary and carrying concealed weapons.

Night Marshal Hall saw the men climb a telephone pole to get on top of the building. He got George Mackey, who has been guarding the debris of the bank, grocery store and newspaper buildings which recently burned here, to watch while he called for Marshal Bloomfield. When Bloomfield arrived, he climbed the post and threw a flashlight on the men, who were surprised. He ordered them, to move back while he picked up two automatic pistols and the brace and bit. One of the pistols was cocked and ready for use. The men were marched to jail. They said they had no home city and denied being here in a car, but Bloomfield said he saw them in the car Saturday night and again Sunday. However, the auto still not located, the men claiming that some body else had driven it off. Roy Powell, auto mechanic identified the men as two who brought a car to him for repairs.

SHANGHAI, China, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Reds in the vicinity of Wusuei, Hupei Province, today attacked the American gun boat "Panay" with machine gun fire.

Crews from the gun boat returned the fire. It is not known how much damage was done to the attackers. The damage to the gun boat was slight.

U. S. Extension Workers Visit Southern States

C. L. Chambers and H. W. Gilbertson, representatives of the Extension Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, have been sent into the drought-stricken area in the Central and Southern States to assist the State extension organizations in coordinating efforts to relieve the emergency caused by continued lack of rainfall. Their itinerary includes Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and will probably be extended if need is found for relief measures in additional areas. Effort will be made to put the organizations in the drought areas in touch with the supply of feedstuffs most quickly available.

Maryland will play 12 football games this fall.

Body Found in River Is Little Rock Man

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The body of a man found floating in the Arkansas river Tuesday, was tentatively identified today as John Egner, 63, of Little Rock.

Identification was made possible by a watch and clothing on the body. Acquaintances of Egner said they belonged to him and he has not been seen for several days. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

Danube Diver Deaths Bring Stricter Rules

BUDAPEST, Aug. 27.—(UP)—To minimize the number of deaths from drowning in the Danube, which divides Budapest into the twin cities of Buda and Pest, the municipal council has doubled the number of river guards and lifesavers for the remainder of the summer and has made it illegal for anyone to go on the river in a canoe without having passed a swimming and paddling test.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

A Closeup of Woodcock, Uncle Sam's New Prohi Chief

As U.S. Attorney in wet Maryland he fought hard for the dry laws.

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Mr. Amos Walter Wright Woodcock, who has been appointed to the hardest job in the world, is going to do the best he can.

President Hoover had to find a director of prohibition for the Department of Justice when it took over enforcement on July 1 and Woodcock appeared to be the logical man. To others in Washington he seems as able and well equipped for the post as anyone in the procession of persons who have supervised the noble experiment—and more so than some of them.

Woodcock will be the executive of prohibition's new Big Three—Attorney General Mitchell, Assistant Attorney General Youngquist and Woodcock.

His effort to obtain a semblance of enforcement will not be a feat, but it will be strong and vigorous. You can tell that much from his record and his personality. His superiors, including Hoover, want to demonstrate as conclusively as possible whether prohibition can be enforced. Woodcock, who has been described as a "hard-boiled idealist" will try to find out.

A Dry Methodist

Apparently the appointment was made without any conferences with the Anti-Saloon League and other dry organizations—something unique if true—but Woodcock is a Methodist and a dry. As U. S. district attorney in wet Maryland he has fought aggressively for the dry laws.

His able performance at Baltimore in the face of adverse sentiment made him conspicuous. But Woodcock prides the fairness of Maryland juries.

"They were quick enough to convict when we had the evidence," he says.

The director is rather quiet and modest, but interviewing him is a pleasant job because he is an amiable man with a substantial sense of humor.

He is 46 years old, five feet and eight and three-quarters inches tall and 150 pounds in weight. He is somewhat bald and doesn't care. He has a firm chin and kindly face.

There has never been any Mrs. Woodcock, which means of course that after dinner he will have time to think things out for himself without any solicited or unsolicited advice on how to enforce prohibition. He has always lived with two sisters at Salisbury, Md., where he was born.

He has an excellent war record and is commonly called "columel" in accordance with his A. E. F. rank. Long before the war and afterward he maintained keen interest in soldiering.

Plays No Golf

He plays tennis but no golf. Music and literature interest him in the evening and since his Harvard days he has been enthusiastic about modern British drama from Sir Arthur Pinero down the line.

Former secretaries are usually reliable character witnesses and one of Woodcock's says:

"He's a straight thinker and a straight shooter. He's clean-cut and direct and a man of his own opinions, unlikely to be swayed after he has made a decision."

One of Woodcock's favorite stories, concerning a remarkable climax to one of his pleas before a wartime military court, is this one:

"I was a plain infantry officer and we were down on the Alsatian front when I was appointed to defend a sentry who had killed another soldier. The woods were very dark, and there and the inhabitants of the section were both French and German, so there had been a lot of night signaling with lights. A French commandant had issued an order to shoot at any light that appeared. The victim of this particular shooting was a company clerk who was stepping out of a little house, showing light through the open door.

The sentry had shot and killed from a distance of a hundred yards.

"The general wanted an example made. He thought the shooting was silly.

"The court-martial was held in a little school house, lighted by candles on the school benches. The court was made up of generals and colonels.

"The main point of my defense was to show that this boy who had been up in the front line trenches was under fearful nervous strain. These generals didn't know what it was like; they had never been up there. They didn't know how, at night, a stump comes to look just like a man and a bush appears to be a horse. I could see I wasn't getting anywhere with that argument.

A German Air Raid

"By plain freak luck I was still arguing when a German plane came over and saw the light filtering from the schoolhouse. It turned a machine gun on that schoolhouse and let go.

"Those generals and colonels knocked off those candles and dove unaimingly under the school benches. That was the climax of my argument—they found out what it meant to be under fire. And as soon as the court had collected itself again that sentry was acquitted right away."

Years after the war Woodcock found himself again successfully defending men who had killed. As U. S. district attorney he represented nine prohibition agents accused of murder. In 1921 he obtained acquittal for four agents who killed Lawrence Wenger, in 1925 the acquittal of another agent who killed Joe Buongiorno and later he saved four agents accused in the death of Charles Gundlach, a farmer.

Although he successfully prosecuted some big alcohol distilling cases, he was unable to convict Congressman John Philip Hill when the latter made wine and publicly bragged about it.

Woodcock took his law degree at the University of Maryland in 1910 and in A. M. at Harvard in 1912. After that he was a lawyer in Baltimore.

He was an assistant attorney general of the state when appointed U. S. District attorney in 1922.

He connected with the national guard in 1917, served on the Mexican border in 1916 as captain and major in France before being promoted to a lieutenant-colonelcy for meritorious iron line conduct, has been the American Legion's departmental commander in Maryland and is now a lieutenant-colonel in the U. S. Reserve corps. He was in the Meuse-Argonne offensive and commanded a battalion at the capture of Rechem Hill, north of Verdun.

Cited for Gallantry

Here is his citation for gallantry in action, won when he was a captain, 115th infantry, 29th division, at Bois de Consenvoye:

"On the evening of October 8, when the battalion had reached the normal objective of the brigade, further advance into the open ground beyond was prevented without heavy loss by an enemy machine gun located in a runken road, which machine gun could not be reached by fire from the cover of the woods. Captain Woodcock, while endeavoring to find a way to silence the gun, located a 37-millimeter gun and two members of its crew, which gun and crew had become separated from its own battalion. Captain Woodcock personally led the men and assisted them in carrying the gun in the face of fire of enemy machine guns from the woods to a place in the open field where the enemy gun in the runken road could be reached by enfilading fire. He directed the laying of the gun and encouraged the gunner until the enemy machine gun was silenced, thereby allowing his battalion to resume the advance."

helps make Long Distance like a local call

A vest-pocket will hold it.

How would you like to pick up your telephone and, almost as quickly as on a local call, get in touch with friends, relatives, business associates, a hundred...two hundred...miles away?

It's easy. All you have to do is give the number of the out-of-town telephone you are calling.

Knowing the number saves the operator the time of looking it up in the directory, and enables her in most cases to ring the telephone almost as quickly as if it were in your own town.

To make it easy for you to use this speedy method, we will supply you, if you wish, with an "out-of-town number book," listing the names and addresses of your out-of-town friends, relatives, business associates, and telling you how much it will cost to talk for three minutes to each.

THIS BOOKLET IS FREE

To obtain one, simply write on the coupon the names and addresses of three or more persons in other cities whose telephone numbers you would like to keep handy. Then mail or bring the list to the office of the telephone company.
